Video inspires racism discussion

By Dustin Shekell
Spartan Daily Staff Writer

A race relations seminar featuring a screening of the video, "The Color of Fear" was conducted Monday in the Morris Dailey Auditorium, giving the entire SJSU community the opportunity to thoroughly discuss the effects of racism.

"The Color of Fear" is an award-winning video discussing the ramifications racism has had on the lives of eight North American men of African, Asian, European and Latino descent. Each ethnic group was represented by two men whose lives had been touched by the ugly hand of racism.

"Why can't we all pretend to be white people?" said Victor, one of the African-American members of the group in the video. "There is no American ethnicity. You have to throw away your ethnicity to be an American."

One of the European-American representatives in the video seemed to take the brunt of the anger and frustration of the panel when he continually disagreed with everybody's views of racism.

"You people have no comprehension that the world is open to you," David said, speaking to the non-white members of the panel. "You block your own progress."

A portion of the video focused on minority against minority racism. Although members of the group expressed apprehension about discussing this topic, which could further fuel white racism against them, the

Speaker recounts Holocaust experiences

By Michael Barton
Spartan Daily Staff Writer

Holocaust survivor Lore Gilbert spoke to an audience of 12 people Monday in the Almaden room of the Student Union to commemorate the Holocaust in an event sponsored by the Jewish Student Union.

"What's interesting today is we're all saying 'Let's talk about it,'" Gilbert said. "It wasn't like that in the past."

She began talking about her Holocaust experience in 1990 when she was interviewed for a series containing an oral history of her Holocaust experience. The tapes were produced by the Northern California Oral History Project in San Francisco and shown on local public television.

Before 1990, her experience as a child in Warmia, Germany in the mid-to-late 1930's haunted her in her dreams. She recounted being harassed and stoned by German children as she walked to and from school. She still has never been back. "To this day I am not sure which is the nightmare or reality."

Gilbert said she remembers clearly when the Nazis came to her largely Jewish town to round up all the men. She said she thought it was snowing because the Gestapo had cut up peoples' featherbeds and down pillows and shaken them, releasing the down feathers into the street.

Her father was luckily away on business and they hid in his business office as the Nazis roused the locals and hauled away the men, she said. From there they moved to Heidelberg, a more liberal college town that was not targeted yet. There she felt freedom through anonymity.

She told the audience a story of per-

Marching against conservatism

By Michael Barton
Spartan Daily Staff Writer

Responding to what march organizers said they see as a rising ultra-right wing stronghold on politics and attacks on civil rights, thousands of community activists marched along the San Francisco waterfront Sunday in the "Fight the Right March."

The purpose of the march, said National Organization for Women representatives, was to create a unified movement to defeat the anti-affirmative action initiative, the California Civil Rights Initiative (CCRI) headed for the November ballot.

"For the first time in this country, an extremist, ultra-right wing has taken control of one of the two major centrist political parties," said feminist leader Gloria Steinem, a speaker at the rally before the march. "The entire country is focused on California ... because you will determine the fate of affirmative action in this whole country by your vote."

Marchers organized at Fort Mason Sunday morning. The march began at 1 p.m. after a short standoff with Jenny Guembles, who has AIDS. She unsuccessfully attempted to address the morning rally despite the help from ACT

Not that simple: examining the death of Jason Cooper

Two months ago, a man died during a fight at a popular downtown night club. Today, some people are still asking, 'Why?'

By Jeffrey Niese
Spartan Daily Staff Writer

Last week the San Jose Planning Commission voted 6-0 to close the Oasis, a downtown San Jose night club, almost two months after Oakland resident Jason Scott Cooper, 21, was beaten to death there on a night when police used tear gas to control the crowd.

The San Jose Police Department still has no suspects in the death, and the family's $5,000 reward has yet to be claimed.

Sgt. Bob Beams, SJPD spokesman, said the "riot" and death that occurred that night were caused by "people just wanting to fight."

But it's not that simple says a San Jose man who did not know Cooper, but who was with him just before he was taken to the San Jose Medical Center, where he later died.

Cordell Johnson, an administrator of justice major at San José City College and a frequent Oasis patron, claims that off-duty officers hired by Oasis as security did not do all they could to save Cooper, and that the whole story of what happened that night is not being heard.

"(Cooper) could have been helped at least 10 minutes before paramedics got there," Johnson said.

Johnson said he tried to get police in front of the club to help Cooper, who had been beaten unconscious inside the club and then carried out a back door by an unidentified club patron.

But Johnson said police wouldn't listen.

"The police screwed up and they know it," he said. "They're trying to cover it up."

Johnson said police at the scene told him that he was being too emotional, and that as long as Cooper was still breathing, he would be OK.

Unfortunately, he wasn't. Cooper died at 3 a.m. The coroner's investigator said he died from heart damage caused by chest injuries.

For the previous eight months,

Oasis owners had rented out the club on Thursday nights to Executive Entertainment, who called their night Club Flavor and played mostly hip hop music.

Jack Rosicki, president of JR Presents and owner of Oasis, declined to be interviewed for this story.

Johnson arrived at Club Flavor between 12:30 and 1 a.m. on Feb. 23 in part because two groups, the Twinz and Dovesback, were performing that night.

Johnson said he was in the back of the club close to the restrooms when

The media need to get back on track ... before they do some serious damage ...

Sudden impact

By Leslie Ashbury

Everywhere we look, there is some form of information presented to us. There is not one place that we can go anymore without the media bearing the hottest news. Lets face it, the media are one of the most powerful tools in this country of ours.

We would like to believe that we are intelligent enough not to be molded by others. After all, we are thinking creatures with minds as individual as our fingerprints, but, admit it or not, we value other's opinion — especially the media. The final decision may be ours, but our experiences affect our decisions.

The media, however, do have some effect on our decisions. We read newspapers and watch television on a daily basis. That is going to affect the way we think about certain topics and the way we decide.

The fact remains that politicians rely heavily on the media. One of the biggest things they try to accomplish during their campaign is gaining the support of the newspapers. They recognize how much the media affect the way people vote, so they try to gain the approval of the publication in the opinion pages.

It's sad that we believe a lot that the media say, but it's definitely true. We never doubt what is reported by a reputable news station and rely on them to give us information for the decisions we need to make.

A theory called "agenda setting" states that the media does not necessarily tell people how to think, but what to think about. Therefore, the media set what comes to your mind and what doesn't. I would think that by getting you to think about something, the media help you make up your mind.

What they choose to relay to you will affect how you perceive that information and what others do with it. You often hear of government officials succumbing to the pressures of the press. A leak by a news station could mean the difference between a successful indictment and a failed one.

For instance, due to a CBS news leak, the FBI

The media need to stop when they get information and think about how it will affect people ...

mation that is presented to them, without a thought to how it affects the people, then how are they doing the public any good?

Half this world probably would not have known about kidnappings, such as Polly Klaas, or the Menendez murders. With the media choosing these terrible crimes as newsworthy topics, we soon became "experts" on the cases.

We do need to be informed, and without the media, we probably would know nothing, but I think that the media needs to find a focus of the news that is informative and helpful to everyone. Playing out such news stories to an extreme extent distorts final decisions.

How can people like Theodore Kaczynski, Richard Allan Davis, or the Menendez brothers get a fair trial anywhere in the United States? After all the media play, I believe that it is not possible. Even if the evidence were so blatantly against them, they deserve the fair trial that this nation promises to all.

The media are so caught up in getting the scoop on their competitors that they do not stop to think of their impact and any possible outcomes. I would think that the main reason the news exists is to inform, not compete. It is a public service.

I realize that they are all businesses that must strive to stay alive, but there is a fine line between informing and leaking information that is not necessary for the public to hear. Business ethics have become so loose that the sole purpose behind businesses have long been forgotten.

The media need to stop when they get information and think about how it will affect people and even the law. Getting the scoop is not always the best thing. The way people live is affected by what is reported and what is not. The media need to get back on track and realize this before they do some serious damage. It is too powerful of a tool to be taken as lightly as it is. Some things are better off left unheard.

Flight from right

Sunday in San Francisco, while families flew kites in Golden Gate Park, boaters sailed in the scenic bay and people who have jobs spent the money they work so hard for, the hate mongers took to the streets again.

It was the same old people, the same tired speeches, the same anti-American crowd — the 1960's wannabes — at yet another failing display of activism so cleverly donned the "Fight the Right" march. The event was sponsored by the National Organization for Women, a group which could more aptly be called the "National Organization for Liberal, Lesbian Women," because it represents neither true feminism nor the beliefs of mainstream women. NOW's defense of Anita Hill and silence in the case of Paula Jones comes to mind.

KEN MCNEILL

In the weeks prior to the march, organizers and supporters painted it as a huge coalition of people from across the country gathering in support of affirmative action, women's right to choose abortion and gay rights. They anticipated more than 100,000 people.

What they got was about 13,000 people and the usual bottom-feeders addressing the cameras (oops, I mean the crowd), speaking in generalities and spouting their own brand of hate against anyone who might disagree with their views.

People like Jesse Jackson, a man of the "cloth" (his just happens to be cashmere) who has made his living off of other people's misery and would stick his nose in any liberal cause if it meant he could get his picture in the paper and a few more donations to his Rainbow Coalition.

Gloria Steinem, a woman who has long outlived her usefulness, was there desperately clinging to a time when she may have been relevant to the feminist cause. "The extremist ultra-right wing has taken control of one of the two major centrist political parties. They are racist; they are sexist; they are homophobic," she told the crowd.

If this is true, then she failed to mention that racist, bigoted, sexist, Christian-phobes have taken over the other two parties.

Actor Danny Glover, the obviously oppressed actor who has made millions in the American movie industry, helped lead the charge. I have a theory on why actors take up these types of causes. Here, you have individuals who have earned a ton of money living in a fantasy world and feeling guilty about it, especially if they are a member of a minority group. Maybe they feel they don't deserve it. They make their fortunes pretending to be someone they are not. After a while, they want to be known for something they do themselves. They want to be taken seriously. Therefore, when the actor and his money are invited to join a cause as "right" as this, they gladly hold the banner. "See, I'm a real person too."

The fight against the California Civil Rights Initiative was the main issue of the day; the CCRI which, when passed by the voters of California, will stop the unAmerican activity of affirmative action. No longer will individuals be given such things as jobs and scholarships based on the color of their skin (sounds vaguely similar to the Civil Rights Act). No, now people would be selected on merit (sounds vaguely similar to the argument for the Civil Rights Act).

What I didn't see at the rally, at least in the 15-second television news clips the media deemed appropriate coverage, were people in support of families, people without hate or people who even liked the United States. One person who attended the event said "... just add torches and the whole thing would have looked like Nuremberg, Germany in the 1930s."

These people foster the same hate and racism they so openly oppose. They are hypocrites. They see American nationalism as something evil. The light of truth hurts their eyes and they scurry about the floor shouting, "Racist! Homophobe! Sexist!" From their perspective, the worst thing one could be is an American who loves God, his country and has a black and white view on morality.

The march was a joke and a failure.

Letters to the Editor

Beating victims were not lucky

I am angered by the column "We shouldn't reward illegal acts" (April 9). I can't believe that anyone could view the beating of the undocumented immigrants as "lucky." I don't think Boisvert actually saw the videotape with the victims getting their faces bashed in by batons. These people were beaten like animals by savages.

Boisvert then says that "illegal aliens" will now have "high hopes of getting caught and then beaten for 15 secs." so they will be rewarded. When Rodney King was beaten by police, how many other black men followed his act and drove drunk so they could get beaten up? And if they did, there were no videocameras to verify it, so how could they possibly sue? So why would Boisvert think other undocumented Mexicans would do the same?

Maybe it's because people like Boisvert have this anti-immigration ideology that undocumented immigrants come here for a free ride. They have this ignorant belief that undocumented people come here to receive welfare and public assistance.

What Boisvert needs to realize is that undocumented workers come to the U.S. for better opportunities and to reunite with loved ones. They come here to work in degrading measures with little pay, with the hope of returning home. They pick your oranges, apples, lettuce, grapes and so on. They don't come here with the intention of getting beat up so they can sue. They come here to support their families just like your forefathers did.

It is sad when there are people who would think that "illegals" will now want to get beaten just for money. I hope that the victims of police brutality do receive all the money they can because they deserve all of it and more.

Justice for all, not just U.S. citizens

As I read the opinion of Lindy Boisvert (We shouldn't reward illegal acts, April 9), I became overwrought with indecision. Should I just skip class and go and lead police officers on a high speed chase in hopes that when I stop, I can be beaten senseless? I'm sure that someone will be around to videotape the incident and then I'll be rich. YEAH RIGHT!!! If the incident in Riverside had not been captured on videotape, as 99 percent are not, would anyone care? I think not.

Does Boisvert honestly think that eyes lighted up when viewing this obscene incident? I cringed as I observed it on the evening news. Did her own eyes light up as these thoughts entered her mind? It seems so. Maybe she would be willing to take a beating like this, but I would not.

I find it pathetic that such an inhumane act as this could be turned into another attack on illegal immigrants. Just one more reason to put up a wall along the border. Militarize. Keep them all out. Some other illegal immigrant might be lucky enough to be caught by racist cops and beaten with a baton. Then he'll be rich. We can't let that happen, now can we?

This is a shame, such an idiotic opinion being published. I guess we are all guaranteed freedom of speech, not necessarily freedom of intelligent speech. We must remember that our pledge to this nation ends "liberty and justice for all," not liberty and justice for all law abiding citizens of the United States only.

Punish both sides, not just police

I am responding both to Lindy Boisvert's column (We Shouldn't Reward Illegal Acts, April 9) and a letter to the editor printed that same day titled "Police behavior was intolerable." I am glad they were printed one under the other, as it was very interesting for me to compare the view points of two knowledgeable students.

Most of us are aware of this latest issue revolving around "police brutality," as we call it. However, I have to question, is it right to punish one side and not another?

From what I understand, the police battered these people badly, and I am in no way in favor of violence being committed by the policemen who are there to serve and protect us. They should be appropriately punished. However, it is wrong and immoral to place these illegal immigrants on a pedestal while all the while pitying them for their hardships.

As the deadline for paying taxes approaches, I wish to remind everyone who is pitying these poor people that many of these illegal immigrants are NOT PAYING ANY TAXES THIS APRIL! Sad but true, many of them are living off of our welfare system and reaping the benefits of this beautiful country of freedom, without paying their fair share. I don't know about other Daily readers, but this concept angers me.

And has anyone given any thought to the fact that these illegal immigrants endangered lives while committing the illegal act of fleeing from police officers?

Steven Ballez
Economics

The speed limit HAS been raised to 65 mph, but weaving in and out of traffic at 100 mph is something I consider more than slightly dangerous. I'm glad I was fortunate enough not to be changing lanes on that freeway that day, as I could have easily gotten in the way of these law breakers and been injured or killed.

As Boisvert says, it is wrong to reward illegal behavior. Too true, only in the diverse country of the good ol' USA can illegal immigrants break the law, endanger the lives of others, and make money off of it, all the while gaining the sympathy of the people.

Again, I am not in favor of violent beatings by police, but I am also not in favor of my tax dollars supporting illegal immigrants who, in this instance anyway, can break the law and get paid for doing it.

Alien not necessarily extraterrestrial

Allow me to disabuse Monica Gomez's argument in "Undocumented people aren't aliens" (April 11).

Spread out in front of me are three reasonably decent dictionaries. The Living Webster, Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary and Webster's New World Dictionary (recommended for journalism students) — none of which cites alien as a "creature from outer space; an extraterrestrial" as the primary definition. Indeed, the first two dictionaries I mentioned don't list the outer space definition at all, which goes to show that if you're looking hard enough for offense, ballast is always available somewhere.

Secondly, I am a Canadian, and just like Mexicans, Irish and Chinese who applied for and waited out the residency process, I was rewarded with Resident Alien status or a "green card." Believe it or not, I don't feel one iota like an extraterrestrial, even on my bad days — though some may wish to dispute it.

Finally, documented but "alienated," I remain, every bit, a person.

Funnyman Forbes and the Anne who would be queen

Taxing humor: Forbes does SNL

NEW YORK (AP) — If you always suspected there was something funny about Steve Forbes' flat tax plan, there was proof Saturday night — live from New York.

The publisher and former presidential candidate was host of NBC's "Saturday Night Live" just in time to remind viewers of Monday's tax filing deadline.

"What could we have done to make paying your taxes easier?" Forbes asked rhetorically.

Forbes' ever-present grin, which endured even when he dropped $30 million in a losing campaign, came in handy. The show mocked not only his tax simplification proposal, but also his wealth and haircut.

Ted Koppel impersonator Darrell Hammond fingered him as the probable author of an anonymous campaign memoir in which the millionaire candidate, the fictitious Teve Torbes, was a "babe magnet" — shades of the best-selling book that is a thinly disguised tale of the Clinton campaign, "Primary Colors."

The late-night TV show often looks outside show business for guests, who have included then-New York Mayor Ed Koch in 1983, and George McGovern and Jesse Jackson in 1984.

Overnight Nielsen ratings, which look at viewership in the nation's 33 largest cities, show that Forbes' "SNL" show outperformed the premiere of Roseanne's sketch comedy series, "Saturday Night Special." "SNL" earned a 6.5 rating, 17 share; "Saturday Night Special," on the Fox network, got a 5.2 rating, 11 share.

NBC's performance was in line with its season-to-date average, while Roseanne improved Fox's ratings for the time period by 8 percent and a full share point.

A single rating point equals 531,000 TV homes, or 1 percent of the estimated 53.1 million big-city households estimated by Nielsen Media Research. Share is the percentage of sets in use that are tuned to a show in its time period. Figures for the entire nation won't be available until Thursday, network officials said.

Female stars in recipe for success

NEW YORK (AP) — Take a star from "Melrose Place" — Heather Locklear, for example — add an ordinary TV movie script portraying the comeback of a victimized woman, and there's a deal to be made.

With little to distinguish one movie from the next, TV producers say the only winning ticket is to feature a hot female star from one of television's hottest shows.

"You can attach any of the gals from 'Beverly Hills 90210' or 'Melrose Place' to a blank piece of paper, and you'll wind up with a network deal," a producer who asked to remain anonymous says in the April 20 "TV Guide."

Thus, viewers have already witnessed such made-for-TV classics as Lori Loughlin's "Co-ed Call Girl" and Tiffani-Amber Thiessen's "She Fought Alone."

Locklear is commanding $500,000 per TV movie. Spelling of "90210," and her former castmate Sherry Doherty are right behind, in the $400,000 range. Other actresses on the two hot shows earn about $250,000 for a starring role.

Magic ignores his own advice

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When his teammates got into trouble this season, Magic Johnson was outspoken in his criticism. Guess who's in hot water now?

The Los Angeles Lakers basketball star was ejected for bumping a referee after he was whistled for a technical foul in the second quarter of the Lakers' 118-114 victory over the Phoenix Suns on Sunday. Afterward, Johnson acknowledged he will probably be suspended.

"I have to accept the responsibility for what I did," he said.

The incident was out of character for the 36-year-old team leader who chided forward Cedric Ceballos last month for leaving the team without permission, and guard Nick Van Exel last week for a similar referee-bumping incident.

"I want to be the best example for this team," Johnson said. "I harp on the other players all the time for what they do wrong, and now I do this. I just hope they still hear my voice."

Princess Anne picked by Brits

LONDON (AP) — Once the least popular of Queen Elizabeth II's four children, Princess Anne is now the royal more Britons would like to see as their monarch.

Those questioned in a new poll chose Anne — eighth in line to the throne — from a list of heirs and public figures.

She polled 33 percent with heir-apparent Charles second, backed by 26 percent of respondents in the Mori poll, commissioned by Independent Television.

Only 47 percent thought Charles would make a good king, compared to 82 percent in a 1991 poll. His reputation has suffered following his 1992 separation from Princess Diana, and subsequent confession of adultery.

Their son Prince William, after Charles in the succession, came in third place.

Grateful

Most of Jerry Garcia's ashes strewn into the S.F. Bay

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Most of the remains of Grateful Dead founder Jerry Garcia were strewn on the waters of the Golden Gate Monday by the guitarist's family and friends.

A small portion of Garcia's ashes were deposited in India's Ganges River on April 4 by Garcia's widow, Deborah Koons Garcia, and band member Bob Weir, said bank spokesman Dennis McNally.

Attending the ceremony aboard a private boat were Garcia's widow, band member Phil Lesh and his wife Jill, Weir and his friend, Natasha Muenster. Weir read a poem by band member Mickey Hart, who could not attend.

Video: Event shines light on racism

African-American, Asian-American and Latino men openly talked about the bigotry they have felt toward the other minority races during their lives.

"(Asians) are the model minority," Victor said. "White people say 'Why can't you people be more like those people?'"

The Japanese member of the panel talked about the hatred his family felt toward African-Americans after his mother was killed by a African-American man. He said he always wanted to tell his father to "remember what happened to us," as a result of irrational racial hatred his family faced in America.

"(The seminar) made me feel like I should be proud of who I am," Japanese-American and SJSU student Machi Goto said. "Because of my accent I have sometimes been afraid to speak in public, this will help me feel good about myself."

Besides viewing the video, the 500 people who attended the event were asked to participate in a series of exercises. The video's producer, Lee Mun Wah, said he hoped the exercises would open the dialogue necessary to achieve a level of racial harmony.

Each audience member was asked to pair up with someone very different than themselves, either ethnically or in gender. The pairs were asked to examine the facial features of their partners and think about what that person's hair, eyes, nose and mouth said about their ethnicity and the stereotypes of their race.

The pairs were also asked to discuss the ways the different aspects of this seminar affected them. This pairing exercise was an attempt to make people of different backgrounds become slightly more multicultural, Lee said. Another of the activities conducted by Lee and his associates was asking the audience to stand in response to a series of questions about the state of racism and racial stereotypes in this country. This exercise further demonstrated the overwhelming effects racism has had on every minority member in America, often causing them to be ashamed of who they truly are.

In the video, each man emotionally and candidly spoke of the scars racism has left on their lives and the ways bigotry has slanted their views of each of the other races represented on the panel. Most of the video focused on the inequality in this country between whites and all non-white races.

"(The seminar) made me feel like I should be proud of who I am."

Cooper

the fights first broke out about 1:40 a.m.

Johnson said he watched one fight start with a couple of pushes between two guys and their friends, then explode into a 25-member brawl in a matter of seconds.

At this point, according to security and other club patrons, several other fights broke out.

Johnson said he could see Cooper off to the side of him. "I saw Cooper standing with his hands down in a corner when he just got hit," he said.

Johnson said Cooper fell to the ground, where he lay unconscious. He said Cooper was stomped on seven or eight times before a man Johnson did not know carried Cooper outside and laid him down on the sidewalk.

Johnson, a U.S. Army combat lifesaver, followed them outside. At this point, he said, Cooper was unconscious and his vital signs were weak.

"His pants had been pulled to his ankles, and there was blood around his mouth," Johnson said.

A second unidentified man also stopped to see if Cooper was OK.

The cry for help

Johnson said one of the men told him to call 911. Johnson left Cooper with the two other patrons and ran to the front of the club to ask the seven or eight officers there for help. Johnson said he told the officers that there was a man that was hurt, and for them to call an ambulance.

"I told the officers, 'This guy is really hurt; he needs the paramedics,'" Johnson said. "One officer asked me if he was breathing; I said he was. He said, 'If he is breathing, he will be OK.'"

Johnson said he then tried to plead with the officers to get them to help, but they were reluctant. After about 10 minutes of arguing with them, he said he finally persuaded one officer to go back and look at Cooper.

Johnson said that when they turned the corner to walk toward the door Cooper was near, they saw a six-foot, six-inch, 300-pound man jumping up and down on Cooper's chest and head.

When the officer got to the man stomping on Cooper, the officer just pushed him aside with his baton and told him to get lost, Johnson said.

Johnson said he wonders why the officer did not detain the individual whom they had seen hurting Cooper. He said the ambulance arrived within about 20 minutes, and added that, "I believe Cooper could have lived from what happened inside the club. It's what happened outside the club (that killed him)."

The next day

Johnson said he did not find out about the death until 10 a.m. on Friday, when his fiancée, Julie Galván, a Spartan Daily supervising editor, paged to tell him that a friend of theirs, Chris Taylor, a security guard for Executive Entertainment, had called her at home with the news.

Johnson said he was distraught about the situation, especially when he thought Cooper could have lived had police listened to him sooner.

Johnson contemplated whether he should go to the police and file a report, for fear of the repercussions it could have on a possible career in law enforcement.

But on Friday, Johnson decided to call SJPD Det.

Sgt. Donald Moore and told him he wanted to talk to him about what happened the night Cooper died. They scheduled an appointment, and on Wednesday, Feb. 28, Moore visited Johnson at his apartment. Damon Skillern, a friend of Johnson's and a member of Oasis security who was working that night, was also there.

Johnson and Skillern said the three of them spoke for about a half hour.

"(Moore) was real cool; he was 100 percent for what we were saying when he interviewed us," Skillern said. "He even told us that there are cops on the force who don't like him because he's been outspoken about the department before. He said 'We have some bad cops on the force and I know who they are.'"

Johnson said Moore thanked him for coming forward, because none of the officers working that night had wrote about him in their reports.

"After I talked to Moore I felt real good," Johnson said. "Moore said someone was going to lose their job for this."

No investigation

When Moore was first interviewed by the Spartan Daily, he said no one told the officers in front of the Oasis that Cooper was lying outside a side entrance. But after a second phone call with Moore, when he was asked about visiting Johnson and Skillern, Moore said Johnson did tell the police in front but that Johnson was confused and didn't understand that "there were other things going on."

Moore said the off-duty police were just being cautious, and that no investigation into their actions is under way. "You don't run into a situation; there was a lot going on at that time," he said. He called Johnson a "Johnny come lately who didn't know what he was talking about."

But Johnson and Skillern say they're shocked that Moore is now discrediting their testimony.

"He seemed concerned," Skillern said. "He played a good acting role."

Johnson said he plans to file a complaint this week with Internal Affairs against the SJPD.

"I only want the truth to come out," Johnson said. "There's a difference between death and wrongful death. Cooper shouldn't have died."

Survivor: Speaker says attacks on affirmative action signs of fascism sonal triumph when she was mistaken as a non-Jew and given a piece of looted chocolate by a German soldier in the street. That feeling was short lived as all Jews in Southern Germany were deported on October 22, 1940, she said. "The Gestapo came at 7 a.m. and said 'We are taking you away and you can take whatever you can carry,'" she said. She was 11 years old then.

She said her family was lucky because they were sent to Southern France, where the fascist government was compliant but not as anti-semitic and cruel as the Nazis. But the fear of the Nazis coming and the conditions of living in mud and little food took their toll, she said. "I'm trying to give you a sense of this absolute doom and a sense of being trapped."

Unlike most, her family survived and got out of France. "I can't tell you, I can't stress enough how fortunate my family was," she said. They ended up in the Dominican Republic. She said she has fond memories of her time there. "It was my first experience with feeling free."

Gilbert went back in 1990 for the 50th anniversary of the first Jews to settle there, as part of her coming to grips with the memory. She then passed out pictures of the concentration camp and discussion began.

Gilbert urged the group to fight anti-semitism and bigotry. "Force yourself to speak up," she said. Gilbert said she sees the "winds of fascism" on the rise again, with attacks on affirmative action, for example.

"It's a little step, then another little step" she said of the affirmative action back stepping taking place today. "There are things with the radical right — and not so radical. I don't think they know where they are going with all of this," she said. Even her Jewish friends have forgotten the past she said. That is why she came to speak at SJSU.

In addition to Gilbert's talk, earlier events included a showing of the movie "The Wave" (a true story of an experiment in a high school in Palo Alto that showed the possibility of the rise of fascism) and a slide show of concentration camps in Germany.

Philip Rogers, a computer science major, said he agreed with Gilbert's stance on the lack of improving race relations in America. "We should just put our positive energy into fighting the problems that face us," he said. "Not just express negative emotions."

"(The Holocaust) could easily happen again," said Carol Burns, a child development major.

Liberian standoff continues

Militias honor tenuous truce

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — With rebel militias honoring a tenuous truce, Liberian leaders turned their focus today to a standoff between rival militias at a military barracks.

U.S. military aircraft have evacuated about 500 Americans and more than 1,100 other foreigners since violence convulsed the capital nine days ago. But with only an estimated 50 Americans remaining in Monrovia, the full-scale evacuation operation ended Sunday.

Sporadic sniper fire rang out in downtown Monrovia

Monday and young thugs raced through the streets in stolen vehicles, brandishing AK-47 assault rifles, grenades and machetes and looking for looting opportunities. But they no longer appeared to be menacing civilians now that most shops have been looted.

Charles Taylor
militia leader

The Egyptian Embassy was ransacked overnight and a 17-year-old Egyptian girl was abducted, a spokesman for militia leader Charles Taylor said.

Taylor and his allies have agreed to stop shelling the military barracks in Monrovia, where a rival warlord, Roosevelt Johnson, has been holding hundreds of hostages for more than a week.

But they have refused to negotiate with Johnson over the release of the captives, including 22 West African peacekeepers and some 50 Lebanese civilians.

"As a government, we are not going to negotiate with these terrorists," Taylor, who is also a member of Liberia's ruling council, said at his residence in the former Moroccan Embassy in a Monrovia suburb.

West African peacekeeping troops were deploying around the barracks, Taylor said today, and he urged Johnson to turn himself in to the U.S. Embassy or the United Nations.

Taylor, who touched off the country's civil war with a power grab in 1989, has agreed to maintain his cease-fire only if Johnson surrenders.

A government warrant for Johnson's arrest on murder charges touched off the latest round of fighting in Liberia's nearly 7-year civil war.

The battles have left 60,000 Monrovia homeless and hungry. No one knows how many people have been killed, but dozens of decaying bodies have been seen on the streets.

Russia begins Chechnya withdrawal GROZNY, Russia (AP) — A regiment of Russian troops reportedly pulled out of Chechnya today in the first stage of a phased withdrawal of Russian troops from the breakaway republic.

The move is in keeping with a peace plan proposed last month by President Boris Yeltsin, who is seeking re-election in June and is under pressure to resolve the war in Chechnya, which has claimed 30,000 lives.

Gen. Vyacheslav Tikhomirov, head of Russian forces in Chechnya, announced Sunday that a first stage of withdrawal would take place over the next six weeks, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

Magic suspended for bumping referee in game

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson, who recently criticized teammates for irresponsible behavior, was suspended for three games and fined $10,000 Monday for bumping a referee in the Los Angeles Lakers' game a day earlier.

Johnson will sit out games at Dallas tonight, at San Antonio on Thursday night and at home against Minnesota on Saturday night. He will be eligible to play again in the regular-season finale at Portland on Sunday night.

"I accept the league's fine and suspension and I want all the fans, the media, and everyone associated with the Lakers to know that my actions were unprofessional and wrong," Johnson said in a statement issued by the Lakers before he left for Dallas with the team.

"I apologize to Scott Foster, to all the NBA referees, and to the league and I hope they know, as I do, that the incident was accidental and that I respect them in their professionalism in what is a very difficult job. Hopefully, other players will learn not to even put themselves in a position to make contact with a referee when arguing calls in the future."

"The important thing is for our players to learn from these mistakes and for us as a team to put this behind and get prepared for the playoffs."

Johnson's agent, Lon Rosen, said Johnson "just feels awful about the situation."

"Earvin called (NBA executive) Rod Thorn this morning to apologize about the incident," Rosen said. "He realizes he made a mistake and he's paying for it."

Jerry West, the Lakers executive vice president of basketball operations, said as with the suspension of

Magic Johnson
Los Angeles Lakers forward

Nick Van Exel last week, "We agree with the league's decision 100 percent."

"These incidents are regrettable and have been a distraction from what I believe the fans really want to see — the basketball action on the court," West said. "Our focus now is on getting our entire team back together and getting ready for the playoffs."

Van Exel was suspended for the Lakers' final seven regular-season games and fined an NBA-record $25,000 for bumping referee Ron Garretson onto a scorer's table with his left forearm in a game at Denver last Tuesday night.

Johnson also got an automatic $1,000 fine for being ejected — his first ejection since Dec. 26, 1988 in Phoenix. He is the third prominent player suspended recently for making contact with a referee.

The first was Chicago's Dennis Rodman, who was suspended for six games and fined $20,000 for head-butting Ted Bernhardt in a game last month. The second was Van Exel.

Johnson was harsh in his criticism of Van Exel, a fact Johnson discussed Sunday.

"I'm harping on them and staying on them, and then I come up and do something like this," Johnson said. "I'm just hoping that my voice will still be heard in the locker room."

Johnson also criticized teammate Cedric Ceballos, who left the team for what he called personal reasons, but was discovered on a water-skiing vacation in Arizona.

Johnson said after Sunday's game that if it had been a veteran referee, things probably would have been different.

But it was Foster, a 29-year-old second-year referee on the job, not a veteran. He called no foul, and Johnson protested. Foster quickly called a technical.

After the technical was called, there was contact between the two, and it became another black mark on player referee relations.

"I only said, 'He fouled me.' It was accidental contact either way," Johnson said after the Lakers beat the Suns without him, 118-114. "My intention was to get his attention. As captain of the team, he must talk to me."

At the very least, some players say they're not shown enough respect. Vlade Divac, for one.

"I was next to (Johnson), I was surprised," the Lakers center said. "They have to talk to those young referees, to have respect for the players."

While West was highly critical of Van Exel last week, he called Johnson's run-in with Foster "inadvertent," a word used often in connection with the incident.

"We've had a lot of older officials leave our league," West said. "What happens is that you get a lot of young officials who are good officials, but they're like young players. They need experience along the way."

One thing is certain — being a basketball official is an incredibly difficult job. Even the very best are open to criticism for no other reason than the subjective nature of the job.

"Probably because of Nick's situation, (the officials) are pulling the trigger a little faster now," Johnson said. "Maybe they're on edge, too."

Johnson said he is unfamiliar with Foster.

"I think if it had been a veteran referee, things would have been a lot different, because they would have acknowledged me and talked to me," he said. "I take full responsibilities for my actions, and he's going to have to take full responsibility for his, too."

"As the captain, they must acknowledge me. If I was cussin' him out or cursin' him out, I'd understand that. But at no time did I do that."

Johnson didn't say whether Foster should have stopped the game to listen to him without calling a technical foul, or heard him out after the bump, without tossing him from the game.

Athletics rally for five runs

Oakland hits .500 with win

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Oakland scored five runs with two outs in the seventh inning Monday night, sending the Athletics to an 8-3 victory over Texas and handing the Rangers their first home loss this season.

The A's broke open a 3-3 game as seven straight batters reached base, five on hits and two via walks. Pedro Munoz ignited the rally with an RBI double off the top of the left-center field wall. Jason Giambi singled home Munoz and Mike Bordick singled in two more runs, all off Gil Heredia (0-1).

Terry Steinbach homered for Oakland, which improved to 6-6 with the victory. The A's are at .500 for the first time since last July 14.

Texas' loss ended an eight-game home winning streak dating to last season. The Rangers were 6-0 this year at The Ballpark in Arlington.

Mickey Tettleton hit his third homer for the Rangers.

Mike Mohler (1-0) picked up the win with 3 2-3 innings of relief.

After replacing Aaron Small with one out in the sixth, he walked the first two batters he faced to load the bases. However, he got out of the jam with consecutive pop outs.

Left-hander Steve Wojciechowski, called up from the minors to start for Oakland, left with two out in the second after he was hit on the second finger of his pitching hand by Darryl Hamilton's line drive.

Texas started Darren Oliver, who had been sidelined since last June 26. Oliver had surgery Aug. 25 to repair his partially torn left rotator cuff. Oliver gave up three runs and six hits in 5 1-3 innings.

The A's reached Oliver for a run in the first on a walk to leadoff hitter Ernie Young and Berroa's double.

Ivan Rodriguez put Texas ahead 2-1 in the bottom of the first with a two-out, two-run single, but Oliver couldn't hold the lead.

Steinbach led off the second with a 427-foot homer, his third this season and 100th of his career. Giambi then singled, Bordick doubled and Young walked again to load the bases. Oakland went up 3-2 when Oliver hit Brent Gates.

Texas tied it 3-3 in the third on Tettleton's solo homer.

Kings hold two game lead on Golden State, beat Nuggets

DENVER (AP) — Victory was sweet, and so was revenge.

The Sacramento Kings, beaten on the final day of the season here last year in a game that knocked them out of the playoffs and put Denver in, returned the favor Monday night.

Mitch Richmond scored all 17 of his points in the second half, including two baskets in the final 1:10, and the Kings beat Denver 90-86, eliminating the Nuggets from the playoff race.

"It's nice to close out the Nuggets since they closed us out a year ago," Richmond said.

"But there's no popping champagne yet. We're still battling Golden State."

Sacramento holds a two-game lead over Golden State with three games remaining in the race for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Western Conference.

Denver fell three games back with three games left but is eliminated because Sacramento won the tiebreaker, sweeping the season series 4-0.

Olden Polynice had 25 points and 17 rebounds for the Kings, and Sarunas Marciulionis came off the bench to score 19.

With the Kings trailing 81-80,

Richmond hit a running, seven-foot jumper in the lane over Dikembe Mutombo and McDyess with 1:10 left.

"I wanted the shot at the end like I always do," said Richmond, who had missed his previous five shots. "I wanted to take the ball to the hoop. I saw Mutombo come at me and you can always see McDyess because he's over the top of everyone else, so I just lofted it up over them."

Two free throws by Brian Grant made it 84-81 with 57 seconds left, and Richmond then hit a 20-footer with 29 seconds to go for an 86-81 advantage.

Rolex Collegiate Golf Rankings

In the Rolex/Nichlaus Individual Rankings, Janice Moodie of SJSU overtook teammate Vibeke Stensrud for the No. 1 spot.

There was a chill in the air Saturday night as the Spartans fell to University of Pacific 4-3 in the 10th inning. The Spartans went on to lose the final game of the series 9-4 on Monday at Municipal Stadium.

Spartans swept by Tigers

Spartan Daily Staff Report

University of Pacific scored five runs in the seventh inning to break a four-all tie as the Tigers went on to defeat the San Jose State University baseball team 9-4 and sweep the three game series.

The Tigers broke the tie when Tim Schmierer, who led the inning off with a triple, scored on a sacrifice-fly by Ron Lewis.

Two batters later, Dee Green's RBI-triple off the left center field wall broke the open. Green finished with three hits, including a double and triple.

The Spartans stayed close as the team came back from a three run deficit. John Alciati's RBI single in the second inning brought SJSU to within one run.

The Spartans tied the game at three when Steve Ashley stroked his second RBI single.

With a pair of doubles, Ryan Johnson led the Spartan offense with three hits. Johnson's batting average climbed to .355.

Oberholser injures wrist, Spartans drop to 14th

Spartan Daily Staff Report

Playing without star golfer Arron Oberholser, winner of four tournaments this season, the San Jose State University men's golf team finished 14th at the Sun Devil/Thunderbird Classic held at the Karsten Course on the Arizona State University campus.

The Spartans posted a 54-hole total of 914 on the par 72, 7057 yard course.

Host Arizona State easily won team honors in the 14-team field with an 864, 13 shots better than Auburn's 877. Washington was third at 877.

Oberholser, who was averaging 71.07 strokes per round for 30 rounds of competition this season, suffered a left wrist injury on the 9th hole of Friday's opening round.

Since he withdrew due to injury, the Spartans were forced to count all of their remaining golfers scores in each round in the team scoring format that normally counts the best four scores from five players.

SJSU was tied for ninth after the second round, but had to count two scores of 80 or more in its final round team score.

Lonnie Damon of Brigham Young University took medalist honors with a 214 total.

He edged out Arizona State's Chris Hanell and Joey Snyder, Knut Ekjord of Colorado, and Washington's Justin Miller

by one stroke.

SJSU's next competition is the 54-hole Big West Championships, April 29 and 30, at the Fort Ord Bayonet Course in Fort Ord.

A young woman holds onto her sign while listening to speakers at the Crissy Field rally after the "Fight the Right March" in San Francisco on Sunday afternoon.

UP, an AIDS activist group. All else went on peacefully as organized.

The marchers headed for Crissy Field at the Presidio. Leading the march were feminists Steinem, Mary Chung and NOW President Patricia Ireland, Rainbow Coalition leader Rev. Jesse Jackson, United Farm Workers' Dolores Huerta and actor Danny Glover.

Organizers said 650 community groups were at the march. NOW estimated that 50,000 people participated in the march, but Presidio's park police estimates put the figure closer to 13,000. Either way, the numbers were far short of NOW's projection of 100,000 marchers attending the rally.

Chanting, "The people united will never be divided," the marchers wound down by the San Francisco marina after 2 p.m. when the Crissy Park rally began.

Banners showed a diverse mix of ideas, ranging from the First Unitarian Church of San Jose to a man and his wife on the sidelines waving an American flag; from Queers for Affirmative Action to the Angry White Guys for Affirmative Action.

Vendors selling socialist and worker-oriented newspapers lined the entrance to Crissy Field as did people distributing free brochures and information. Trash cans were set up by NOW for people to donate money as they walked in, and people with megaphones pleaded for financial support for the event.

At the rally, San Francisco Mayor Willie Brown, San Francisco Supervisor Barbara Kaufman and others spoke to the crowd about the movement to fight the right. "San Francisco alone cannot defeat the right," said Brown, who later pleaded with the crowd to spread the word against the CCRI.

The crowd sat and listened to the speakers who told their stories of how affirmative action was important in their lives.

"Our stories are real," one speaker said. "(The right's) rhetoric isn't." A woman who had undergone a late-term abortion also spoke about "reproductive freedom" and her support for Clinton who recently vetoed a bill aimed at making late-term abortions illegal in cases of severe deformity.

The march was characterized best by one speaker. "The right is too organized; they are way ahead of us," she said. "Today is our day. We can do more than sit around and bitch."

She concluded that the message of the march was to translate frustration into action by spreading the message that the "radical right's agenda is not OK."

"Today is our day. We can do more than sit around and bitch."

San Jose send off draws 200

By Michael Barton
Spartan Daily Staff Writer

About two hundred people attended a "Fight the Right March" send off for San Jose representatives Sunday morning at the county parking lot at First and Hedding streets in San Jose on Sunday.

The send off was led by Supervisor Mike Honda, Gonzalo Farez of the Human Rights Defense Committee.

Honda spoke to the marchers who packed into five chartered buses headed to San Francisco. "Proposition 187 caught most off guard," Honda said through a megaphone. "But not you."

"That's a terrible name for them — the right. Like the CCRI (California Civil Rights Initiative), it's not civil and it's not right," Honda shouted to a cheering crowd. "Why don't we call it the march against the wrong?"

Farez congratulated the crowd for "starting down a new road. The respect for human rights has been lost," he said. "That's why we are here to march."

Lenore Sheridan of the San Jose Chapter of NOW said the march showed groups putting aside their differences to rally against the right. "We are all coming together about defeating the California Civil Rights Initiative," she said. "It's going to be a movement of all working people, not just left-leaning or progressive people who have a stake in affirmative action."

Sheridan said the right has been organized a long time and they are "using affirmative action as a way of attacking unity. They're all attempting to divide us."

The representatives boarded buses that joined what members from NOW estimated to be 30,000 to 60,000 marchers in San Francisco. Presidio's park police estimated the crowd at only 13,000 people.

Look, if you think a talking stuffed moose is pretty amazing, listen to this. I was hanging out with some of the boys the other evening. One of them just bought a new Macintosh. Evidently, Apple is offering incredibly low campus prices on Macintosh computers right now. So he pops in this CD-ROM. Man, you wouldn't believe what this thing could do. No wonder the Mac is one of the most advanced multimedia computers. We're talking sight, sound, full-motion video—the works. Gee, wish I could move like that.

Power Mac 7200/75
8/500MB, CD 15" monitor
Makes it easy to bring the vast new world of the Internet to your desk. And with the Apple Internet Connection Kit and a modem, you'll be surfing on the Net faster than you can say "information superhighway."

Power Mac 7500/100
8MB/500MB, CD 15" monitor
With its amazing multimedia capabilities you can easily bring your work to life. With built-in stereo sound, video graphics and animation—it's why your work will never look or sound the same again.

PowerBook 190/66
8/500MB
One of the most affordable PowerBooks as well as one of the most advanced. Features CD-quality stereo sound output with compatibility, productivity and communication software. Its light weight gives you the flexibility to take it anywhere.
